Berkeley City College’s Global Studies Club sponsors a series of Women’s History Month/International Women’s Day events on campus. They will take place in the college’s auditorium and atrium Tue. through Thur., Mar. 4-6.

Displays in BCC’s atrium will examine women’s lives and how they relate to current events throughout the world. At 11 a.m., Tue., Mar. 4, Carolyn Hunt, a representative from Eve Ensler’s One Billion Rising, a global campaign to end to violence against women and promote gender equality, will distribute bread and roses.

At 12:15 p.m., “Pray the Devil Back to Hell,” the story of a courageous Liberian woman who stood up to the warlords and regime of Liberian dictator Charles Taylor, will be screened in BCC’s auditorium. Admission is free.

At 12:15 p.m., Wed., Mar. 5, “Living Along the Fenceline,” an hour-long documentary about women whose lives have been affected by U.S. military presence in their countries. Admission is free.

Representatives from California’s state universities will be on hand 11 a.m.-2 p.m., Thur., Mar. 6, in Berkeley City College’s atrium to meet and talk with international students about transfer opportunities. F-1 visa international student advisors from CSU campuses in the Channel Islands, Chico, Fresno, Humboldt, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Monterey, Northridge, Sacramento, San Francisco, San Marcos, Sonoma and San Jose will be on hand to advise international students and answer their questions. For details, contact Thomas Torres-Gil at ttorresgil@peralta.edu.

Film maker Mahdi Fleifel’s “A World Not Ours,” will be shown at 7 p.m., Wed., Mar. 5, in BCC’s auditorium. The event, a fund raiser for the Middle East Children’s Alliance and which is co-sponsored by BCC’s Global Studies Club, is $5 for students and $10 general admission. Its focus is on a war without battles and a war without visible end. The filmmaker, born in Ain al-Hilweh, Lebanon’s largest camp for Palestinian refugees, presents a poignant picture of people’s experiences there. Fleifel regularly returned to the camp—after he migrated to Dubai as a child—on family vacations to revisit the extended family there — and continued visiting as a filmmaker, documenting 20 years of a family’s multigenerational experience.

San Francisco State University is accepting applications for its doctoral program in educational leadership. Classes are held every other weekend and in the summer. Interested faculty and staff can find out about information sessions at http://edd.sfsu.edu/prospective-students2 or call (415) 405-4103.

Remember to let your students know that applications form Peralta Colleges Foundation scholarships are due Mon., Mar. 10. Students can visit www.peraltafoundation.org for details, or can visit BCC’s Transfer/Career Information Center, on the 2nd floor to speak with Paula Coil, center coordinator.
