Spring 2010

Spring Semester Is Underway

Time is flying! It feels like just a short time ago that we were getting ready to start the semester and now it is already March! Currently enrolled students, if you are in last semester of study, it is time for you to fill out your petition for an AA degree or certificate of achievement. Pick up the petition in the admissions office and return it (completed) to Jennifer Lenahan in room 261 before March 19.

This semester the ASL Department welcomes Rory Osbrink, a new instructor who is teaching the Deaf Culture II course. Osbrink is also a Deaf Studies teacher at the California School for the Deaf in Fremont. He has previously worked at UC San Diego, Ohlone College, and Gallaudet University.

The Follett bookstore on campus has plans to begin a textbook rental program beginning in the Fall semester. Keep your eyes open for more details about this potentially money saving change. Of course, books will still be available for purchase, too.

Reminder: There will be no classes on Thursday, March 25, an in-service training day for faculty and staff.

Check your calendars! The Peralta Community College District observes Malcolm X day as a holiday. Some district publications show the holiday on May 14 and others on May 19. The correct date is May 14.

James Castle: A Retrospective Exhibit at the Berkeley Art Museum

Born profoundly deaf, James Castle (1899–1977) was a prodigious artist who, without formal training, created a remarkable and vast body of work over the course of his life in rural Idaho. His drawings, cardboard constructions, paintings, and, even textbooks became his chief means of communicating with the world. Despite the barrenness of Castle's surroundings and the solitary quality of his life, his works lack any sense of loneliness, pain, or worry. On the contrary, making art for Castle was clearly an act of confidence, pleasure and curiosity, an act in which he immersed his full awareness. This retrospective is the first comprehensive museum exhibition of his drawings, books, and paper constructions.

Interesting Cable Car Facts:

- In 1964, the Secretary of the Interior named the San Francisco Cable Cars a moving National Historic Landmark.
- In 1998 Fannie Mae Barnes became the first, and so far only, gripwoman working on the cable cars.
- The current cable system pulls all cars at an average of 9.5 miles per hour.
- In the 1880s and '90s, cable cars left from the Ferry Building as often as every 15 minutes.
- The cable cars first went into service in 1873.
- Cable cars today carry nearly 8 million riders every year.

Help for Haiti

On Tuesday, January 12, the focus of the world landed on Haiti and the Haitian people. The world has come together to provide support and strength for those who lost family members and loved ones as well as their homes and neighborhoods.

People around the world are seeking ways to assist by donating food, water, clothing, money and time. We are still in the information gathering process, but thanks to colleagues around the country, we can provide you the following information at this time. If you would like to make a donation, consider one of these organizations.

The Friends of Montfort, Inc., a 501(c)(3) organization, is a support group for the school, Institut Montfort in Haiti, which is run by the Daughters of Wisdom. Institut Montfort has over six hundred deaf and deaf-blind children in three locations in Haiti, the majority are in Port Au Prince. They have begun work to provide relief for the deaf and deaf-blind children of Institut Montfort who are in need because of the earthquake. As you can imagine, they have a myriad of needs. The best way we can help them at this time is by sending cash donations by check made out to "Friends of Montfort, Inc." to Friends of Montfort, Inc., P.O. Box 314, Merrick, New York 11566-0314.

Food for the Poor. Food for the Poor has been involved in Haiti for many years. If you have bulk supplies of food, water, medical, etc., they can be sent to Food for the Poor, 6401 Lyons Road, Coconut Creek, Florida 33073. (Note: the label must include SOURCE CODE 72883)

As always, The Red Cross is an excellent place to start should you want to donate items, money or your time.

ASL Tales Wins Prestigious Benjamin Franklin Award

Winner of the Bill Fisher Award for Best First Book (Children's/Young Adult), ASL Tales: The Princess and the Pea, is a new type of children's picture book designed to be universally enjoyed by both Deaf and hearing readers. The book is a whimsically illustrated version of a classic tale that delights readers with its make-you-smile, character-building twist. Unlike any existing books, this hardcover picture book includes a DVD with master storyteller, Pinky Aiello, telling the tale in American Sign Language (ASL). Designed for pleasure reading and educational use, the package includes learning tools, web-based instruction for teaching fundamentals of ASL syntax and vocabulary, and it can be watched in English, French, Spanish, Mandarin, Vietnamese, Thai, or with English captioning.

ASL Tales Press is the combined work of 20 plus volunteers who recognized that the richness of native ASL storytelling can provide opportunities far beyond what is currently available in popular books on 'sign language'. The majority of materials on the shelves of libraries, classrooms and bookstores, while teaching vocabulary, do not expose readers to the fullness of ASL. This book, and others in the ASL Tales series, can simply be enjoyed as fun and enriching literature

IRS Videos in ASL Now Available on YouTube

With tax season in full swing, did you know that deaf and hard of hearing consumers can find answers to their tax questions directly from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) in American Sign Language?

The IRS has built a YouTube channel complete with a series of ASL videos—that are also voiced and captioned—on a myriad of tax topics, including e-File and Direct Deposit, Free File and Fillable Forms, Education Tax Credits, Unemployment Compensation and Home Energy Credits. ASL videos on many more important subjects for taxpayers will be added as they become available.

Just go to the IRS YouTube channel at www.youtube.com/user/IRSvideosASL to see ASL videos that will help you complete your taxes this year. You can post and share these videos through your websites, vlogs or other social network venues. Click on the subscriptions button at the top of the YouTube page and you can find out right away when future videos become available. Videos in English and Spanish are also available.

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is also committed to making every document on its website accessible to the widest possible audience. Skilled accessibility contractors and IRS accessibility specialists insure that documents are, to the maximum extent feasible, accessible to persons using special assistive technology, including screen reading software, refreshable Braille displays, and voice recognition software. Check the IRS's Alternative Media Center for more information.

An Arctic Community Recognizes Inuit Sign Language

By Nancy Cayton, ASL Department Staff

A 2005 court case against Bobby Suwarak, a deaf man from Nunavut Territory in Canada, brought the existence of an indigenous sign language to the attention of mainstream society. Once people acknowledged that a language with a very limited number of speakers was in use, this begged the question of whether users of the language can get a fair trial.

Prior to 2005, Suwarak had been to court and prison two previous times without attracting much attention. In 2005, however, three successive lawyers appointed to his case refused to represent him, saying he could not receive a fair trial because of his inability to comprehend what was happening.

Suwarak, who became deaf at about 5 years old, grew up in Baker Lake, a community of about 1,700 people in Nunavut. Nunavut, previously part of the Northwest Territories of Canada, is the newest, largest, and least-densely populated Canadian political jurisdiction. It is in the Arctic, entirely above the tree line.

The primary spoken language of the residents, who are Inuit, is Inuktitut. Suwarak attended the local elementary school for only one week before leaving due to the frustration of being unable to communicate with the teacher.

Living in an isolated region, having no formal education, and not using signs that match what Deaf Canadians typically used, people assumed that Suwarak's communication was idiosyncratic, a "homemade" sign language. In previous court appearances, Suwarak's childhood friend, David Kautaq, who learned the language from Suwarak's family, served as the "interpreter" because the court could not locate anyone else who understood him.

Tim Kavanagh, the third in the series of lawyers appointed to the case, had met Suwarak and Kautaq during Suwarak's previous court appearances. Kavanagh doubted that Kautaq had the necessary skills to qualify as a court interpreter—although Kautaq seemed to be able to easily communicate with Suwarak, he had difficulty with understanding court proceedings and the specialized legal vocabulary. In some cases, the language they were using didn't have terms for concepts being discussed.

Although he had refused to represent Suwarak and was not officially on the case, Kavanagh kept an eye on what was happening. When Suwarak was jailed, Kavanagh filed an amicus curiae, a "friend of the court" statement, allowing him to give the judge relevant information about the situation without actually representing Suwarak. Following that, he argued that Suwarak could not get a fair trial without an unbiased and trained interpreter. Since no such interpreter appeared to exist, Kavanagh asked for a stay of proceedings, which was granted.

To ascertain Suwarak's language skills, and thus if he could participate in his own defense and receive a fair trial, Jamie MacDougall, Ph.D., an associate professor at Montreal's McGill University, was brought in. MacDougall specializes in cognition, language, and perception, particularly as it relates to deaf people.

MacDougall had already performed assessments of Suwarak for the previous court cases dating to the late 1990s, as well as doing research on the signing used in Nunavut.

In 2004, MacDougall found that there was enough evidence to conclude that the signing being used by residents, including Suwarak, was an indigenous sign language, now referred to as Inuit Sign Language. It is a very complex sign system and used extensively in the region. The underlying visual-spatial-kinesthetic properties appear to be consistent with other signed languages, though clearly unrelated to American Sign Language (ASL) or Langue des Signes Québécoise (LSQ)*. He recommended training to improve Suwarak's communication skills.

*American Sign Language is used throughout Canada except in the French-speaking areas where Langue des Signes Québécoise, Quebec Sign Language, is used.

Based on MacDougall's findings and other information presented, Justice Earl Johnson of the Nunavut Court of Justice issued an 18-page ruling in June 2005 indicating that Suwarak's case would have to be continued. He gave the court administration a deadline of September 2006, more than 2½ years after the charges were filed, to complete a training program for Suwarak and those who will act as his interpreters during the trial.

When the time period was up, Crown prosecutor Rachel Furey entered a stay of proceedings saying that "It's not in the public interest to proceed," which closed the case.

MacDougall continues to work with the Nunavut Department of Culture, Language, Elders and Youth (CLEY) and the Department of Justice to document Inuit Sign Language and to provide written and audiovisual materials. Some of the materials include an illustrated glossary and a DVD that shows locals telling stories using either ASL or ISL, with translation into the other language, creating an "oral history" of the communities of Taloyoak, Rankin Inlet, and Pangnirtung.

In February 2005, when Suwarak's case initially broke, the Canadian Association of the Deaf released a statement saying, “The CAD completely supports that Inuit Sign Language (ISL) be recognized as the first language of Deaf Inuit people. CAD pledges to provide information and assistance to help promote the visibility of ISL and to build interpreter training programs for wider use of ISL in the region.”

Nunavut currently officially recognizes English, French, Inuktitut, and Innuinaqtun. It is considering adding Inuit Sign Language, as well as American Sign Language, to that list. Premier Eva Aariak has stated that the CLEY “recognizes the uniqueness and importance of Inuit Sign Language (ISL) in Nunavut.” As such, the CLEY believes that ISL deserves special attention and support and acknowledges that there are few resources for it.

There was some activity to include ISL in the Inuit Language Protection Act and/or the Official Languages Act. Although that has not happened, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, which is part of the Canadian Constitution, has a section that makes discrimination, including discrimination against people with disabilities, illegal. 🖐️🖐️

World Federation of the Deaf Statement Regarding the Creation of a Unified Arab Sign Language

WFD calls for the unification in process of Sign Language in the Arab region to cease immediately

The World Federation of the Deaf (WFD) is concerned about steps being taken to unify Sign Languages in the Arab region. There are 22 countries and many more indigenous sign languages in the region.

WFD would like to state that such a step is a violation of the linguistic human rights of Deaf people in the region and an unwanted interference with linguistic diversity. Language planning decisions regarding Sign Languages should always remain with the linguistic community, in this case Deaf people, in a similar way as non-native speakers of Arabic language should not interfere with the planning or development of Arabic. Sign Language planning activities should therefore under all circumstances be contrived and realized in cooperation with National Associations of the Deaf.

According to the WFD Statement on the Unification of Sign Languages: the WFD Board wants to state firmly that any forcible purification or unification of Sign Languages, conducted by governments, professionals working with Deaf people, and organizations for or of the Deaf, is a violation of the UN and UNESCO treaties, declarations and other policies, including the recent UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. Deaf people in every country have the sole right to make changes, if necessary, in their own local, provincial and national Sign Languages in response to cultural changes. The control of the development of any Sign Language must be left to any social group where the particular Sign Language is used.

Every sign language in the world, like any spoken language has its own heritage, history, culture and traditions and such a process of forcible purification or unification would be to disregard all of these aspects of a Deaf community. This would be a violation of the linguistic human rights and cultural rights of a sign language community.

The WFD calls for the unification project to cease. In its place, WFD suggests a greater consultation with Deaf people in the region, and strongly recommends cooperation with WFD Ordinary Members. WFD encourages all parties to achieve mutual understanding for better recognition of national sign languages in the Arab region.

The World Association of Sign Language Interpreters (WASLI) strongly support the views of the WFD in its concern about the proposed steps being taken to unify sign languages in the Arab region.

WASLI is aware that many sign language interpreters are not native users of indigenous sign languages. They are aware of the difficulties faced by interpreters of signed languages in conveying new concepts and terms, in interpreting in higher education or televised news broadcasts for example, and of the wish to find a “solution” be creating a new sign.

WASLI fully endorses the WFD/WASLI joint statement which recognises the primacy of organisations of Deaf People to chart the political, cultural, and educational development of sign language in their country, including the dissemination of sign language dictionaries and teaching materials. 🖐️🖐️
