Description

Berkeley City College's Art and Cultural Studies Programs must recruit and retain individuals who wish to transfer to four-year universities; or who wish to develop skills in the areas of art, figure drawing and cultural studies majors. While the department includes several disciplines (art, communication, humanities, music, philosophy and theater arts), it offers a degree/certificate program in art. Students, alumni and faculty should play an active role in marketing and recruitment processes. A seamless student support system connected to instruction also must continue.

Rationale

Faculty, staff and students in Berkeley City College's Art and Cultural Studies Program will engage in activities which meet the marketing plan objectives listed above. In doing so, the Arts and Humanities Department will aim to build a foundation for future program marketing and recruitment efforts. Meeting these objectives will help the program increase enrollment and broaden public awareness of educational and job options for Art and Cultrual Studies-related majors.

Target Audience

Art and Cultrual Studies programs target audiences include high school students; returning students; employees in arts, communications and graphics-related business, government, and nonprofit agencies.
